

Honoring the Past, Educating for the Future

Recommendations for Teaching and Learning about the Persecution and Genocide of the Roma during the Nazi Era

For too long, the genocide of the Roma has been neglected. The IHRA Recommendations equip policymakers and educators to safeguard the memory of this history – fostering critical thinking and raising awareness of the social injustices Roma communities still face today.

The Recommendations have been endorsed by 35 governments and were developed by IHRA experts in partnership with Roma civil society actors and representatives.

Remember, reflect, educate: Teaching about the genocide of the Roma

Highlighting the importance of Roma communities throughout Europe's history, the Recommendations provide practical considerations for accurate teaching and policymaking.

They aim to:

- ensure future generations understand the historical and contemporary impact of the genocide of the Roma.
- advocate for the integration of fact-based accounts of Roma history and the genocide of the Roma into national and regional curricula as a fundamental part of history education.
- foster critical thinking and human rights awareness by connecting past atrocities to present-day challenges.
